

Who is Mychal Wynn?

For nearly three decades, Mychal Wynn has worked with schools and school districts throughout the United States, Canada, the Caribbean, and Bermuda. A child of poverty, product of urban schools, and first-generation college graduate, Mr. Wynn has taught children and adult learners, co-founded a publishing company, authored 25 books, and currently serves as the CEO of the Foundation for Ensuring Access and Equity, a nonprofit foundation committed to widening the primary-to-postsecondary pathway to college and careers for all students.

What Does Mychal Wynn Do?

Mychal Wynn is a strategist who delivers high-energy, insightful, informative, motivational, and thought-provoking presentations. He synthesizes research, analyzes disaggregated student performance data, and uses anecdotes, visuals, and personal experiences to frame the challenges facing teachers, issues confronting parents, and barriers that students must overcome. Audiences leave a Mychal Wynn presentation knowing why, “It’s All About Strategy”—strategies to achieve school improvement goals, strategies to increase instructional effectiveness of teachers, strategies to increase parent capacity, and strategies to motivate and cultivate successful students.

Who Benefits Most?

School Districts, individual schools, agencies, and organizations who want strategies that will help teachers, expand parent capacity, and motivate students in such areas as:

- Increasing student achievement for ALL students
- Closing the college-knowledge gap
- Encouraging more rigorous course taking
- Motivating students to accept ownership of their own learning
- Building stronger school-community partnerships
- Increasing cultural competency and building stronger teacher-student-family relationships
- Raising test scores and increasing time-on-task

Helping Schools and Families Put Together The Student Achievement Puzzle

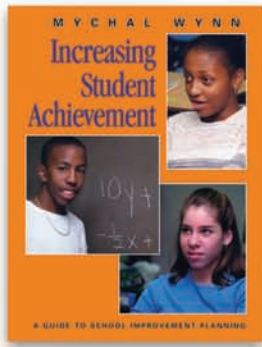

IT'S ALL ABOUT STRATEGY

Motivating • Informing • Strategizing

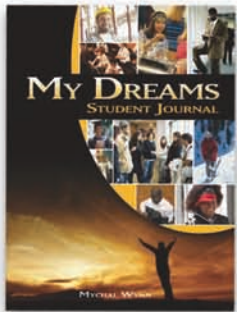

Increasing achievement for “All” students requires a willingness to engage in courageous conversations about disaggregated student performance data. Mr. Wynn brilliantly guides such conversations from “talking” to “strategizing.”

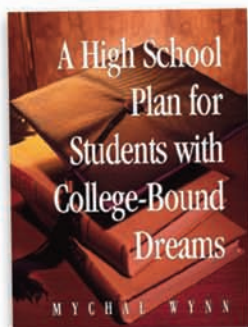

Developing stronger home-school partnerships requires that we build parent capacity. Mr. Wynn speaks with the passion of a parent, the knowledge of an educator, and with humor that combines laughter and learning.

Mr. Wynn understands that inspiring students to accept ownership of their own learning is as important as the teacher, the curriculum, and school policies. Inspiring students to believe in themselves and to dream of a brighter future is good strategy!

Pursuing the 3Rs—Rigor, Relevance, and Relationships—requires strategies designed to close the widely researched “College-Knowledge Gap.” Mr. Wynn brilliantly outlines, both through his books and his presentations, what parents, students, counselors, and coaches can do to ensure that more students are prepared for college.
